Comments from the Monarch coaching staff:

After a long weekend off after a canceled tournament, we looked refreshed and we could absolutely see improvement from our last time out. Unfortunately, in wrestling, those improvements aren't always tangible and don't always result in wins. We were doing a great job getting to our shots, and we haven't done much of that to this point in the year. It feels like we've turned a corner there and now we can focus on finishing those shots when we get to them.

Creston and Shenandoah are both young teams, much like us, but Creston is always tough and Shenandoah is much improved over when we saw them last year. The Shenandoah dual came down to a couple key matches - one that we felt like got away from us and another that we felt like we took from them. It was a tight contest, and we will learn from the experience and use it in the future.

The Monarchs are back in action Friday as the varsity heads to the John J. Invitational at Southwest Valley. Next week is a packed week with four meets on the calendar, so we still need to be locked in and finish out this grind in the season.
